Post-Prostatectomy Management of Stress Incontinence

Comfortable, Convenient and Cost-effective

afex[®]

Active

The afex system makes managing post-prostatectomy stress incontinence easier and more dignified than ever. The 96% cotton boxer briefs discreetly and securely hold a plastic (PVC) curved receptacle inside a front pocket that channels urine into a 500 mL reusable collection bag (12 ml vinyl - 4 to 6 week lifespan). Uncomfortable tubes or straps are not required - just attached the bag directly to the receptacle through the briefs for hours of use without maintenance or changing !!

The basic system shown here (afex Active) can be used for active daytime use such as golfing, fishing, hiking, bowling, walking, gardening, or travelling. Any general out-door activity !

It has three main components: an ergonomic receptacle, boxer briefs and a collection bag. Receptacles are available in 2 styles (high and low, briefs are based on waist / hip size and collection bags come in standard 500 ml size (Vented for sports, or Unvented as standard, or Heavy Duty). The annual cost of AFEX to the NHS can be as low as £160 given the durability of components. Free Sample and home assessment available on request.

Why choose afex?

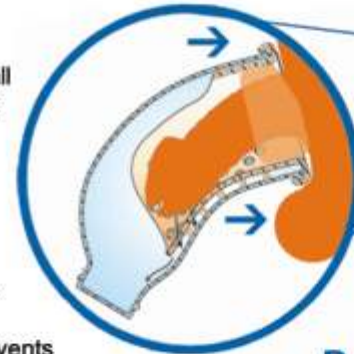

afex[®] User Success

- requires 1) Flaccid Penis to dangle over the testicles when seated
- 2) Dexterity
- 3) Cognitive Skills

Pubic Pressure to hold the receptacle against the body wall comes from a tight but comfortable stretch Brief (4% Lycra)

Secure Positioning of the penis centrally within the receptacle by padded secure wrap hugging the shaft of the penis at the open end of the receptacle. Wrap absorbs splash-back and prevents "popping out" with active movement

Double Walled

inner receptacle lining drains urine away from the penis, helping to keep skin dry
